LEONARDO D. PROLA

Re: Formal Notice dated 3 July 2025 – Ref. 0102559-0000011 EUOI: 2014819704.3

To Whom It May Concern

Your attempt to reframe this matter as defamation, rather than addressing its demonstrable legal substance, has been noted.

It is particularly noteworthy that even your own diplomatic representations appear not to endorse your interpretation of the regulatory framework governing the employment of foreign nationals in Morocco. Nor does ours. A reconsideration may be in order.

That such a position is advanced by counsel of your standing is, at the very least, surprising.

For the record, we categorically deny any wrongdoing and reject your assertions in full.

The facts — already submitted to competent authorities across multiple jurisdictions — are self-explanatory. Any reference to this matter appearing in the public domain, including by third parties, is entirely lawful and falls squarely within the bounds of freedom of expression and public interest reporting, as protected under Italian, European and international law.

Non-specific or informal requests for content removal will not be considered or acknowledged unless accompanied by verifiable documentation. Generic allegations of reputational damage are deemed legally immaterial and will be documented as attempts to exert undue influence.

Any further developments in this matter will be addressed exclusively through institutional channels, including those already in receipt of a detailed legal dossier covering all relevant elements — from regulatory breaches and procedural misconduct to contract formation irregularities and precontractual liability.

Regarding your client's suggestion of a claim for reimbursement: such assertion is unsupported both in fact and in contract. The employment agreement dated 28 February 2025 contains no provision assigning financial liability to the employee in the event of non-commencement and explicitly attributes all work permit obligations and related expenses to the company.

We have neither the obligation nor the intention to engage further via private correspondence.

Finally, any unauthorised surveillance, tracking, or third-party intrusion into professional, digital, or personal domains — already suspected and partially recorded — has been formally incorporated into the existing legal dossier and may be subject to jurisdictional review in due course.

L*eonardo D. Prola*